

A Day at SPARKS Student Care

PARENTING TIPS

5 love Languages

Do you know your child's love language? What really makes your child know you care for and love them?

What actions from you fill your child's emotional tank?

Which love language best reaches your child?

Quality Time:

Not large amounts of time but quality time focused on them

Words of Affirmation:

Telling your child how wonderful & amazing he or she is

Gifts:

Small or minimal cost gifts

Acts of Service:

Making them their favorite meal, mending their special toy, helping them with their work

Physical Touch:

Cuddles, holding hands, arms over shoulders when watching a show

All children need to be shown love in all these ways. Take time to find out what really touches them and you will see a difference it makes in both you and your child.

We could see that the children, who first began as strangers, are now learning to interact and communicate with one another. Each of them with a different personality comes from a different background.

Learning to gel together creates a new dimension of SPARKS in their journey of friendship.

Now the children are busy preparing for their coming common test week, each of them working hard at his or her own pace.

As we continually engage and supervise their homework and give them more practice in their various subjects, we wish them all the best in their coming tests.

You can do it, kids!
